ARE YOU SURE YOU OR YOUR WORKERS ARE SELF-EMPLOYED?

Last year we reported that the House of Commons Work and Pensions Committee published a report calling on the Government to close the loopholes that allow “bogus” self-employment practices, which burden the welfare state but reduce the tax contributions needed to sustain it.

Most of the people working for organisations such as Uber, Amazon, Hermes and Deliveroo are not on the payroll, have limited workers’ rights and are paid for each delivery or “gig”. The Committee recommended a default assumption of “worker” status, rather than “self-employed”. The economist Mathew Taylor was also asked to produce a report on the status of such workers and suggested that a new category of “dependent contractor” should be established.

HMRC and the Treasury have now published a consultation into a thorough review of employment status.

Consultation on employment status

HMRC published a consultation on employment status on 7 February as a follow up to the Taylor Review of Modern Working Practices.

Individuals and their employers have to know which employment status applies to ensure the right protections are applied – from the National Minimum Wage and holiday pay, to unfair dismissal protection and statutory redundancy pay.

Employment status also affects the taxes that an individual and their employer pay. It is therefore essential in maintaining a clear and effective tax base, with individuals and employers knowing what rates of tax and National Insurance contributions (NICs) are applicable to everyone in their organisation.

The existing legislation defining an employee for both tax and employment rights ultimately relies on whether a contract of service exists. No further definition or clarity is provided in the legislation.

As a result, over time the courts have interpreted the legislation and developed tests to determine an individual’s employment status. These tests are contained in a number of key precedent cases, including a mixture of employment rights and tax judgments.

A possible solution suggested is to legislate a more detailed definition of employment incorporating the irreducible minimum core tests established by case law:

- Mutuality of obligation
- Control over the individual
- Personal service

BBC PRESENTER LOSES LANDMARK IR35 CASE

The IR35 personal service company legislation has been on the statute book since 2000 and has never really worked as intended.

The main reason for this is that the interpretation of the legislation is based on the same employment status tests referred to above, which lack clarity and are open to interpretation by the courts.

However, HMRC have recently won a key case on IR35 at the First Tier Tribunal concerning the BBC presenter Christa Ackroyd.

Ms Ackroyd had been supplying her services to BBC through her personal service company Christa Ackroyd Media Services Ltd since 2006/07. The Tribunal agreed with HMRC that the hypothetical contract between the BBC and Ms Ackroyd would have been a contract of service. The existence of a seven-year contract meant that Ms Ackroyd's work at the BBC was pursuant to a highly stable, regular and continuous arrangement. It involved a high degree of continuity rather than a succession of short term engagements. That is a pointer towards an employment contract.

Another key factor considered by the court was that her fellow presenter on "Look North" was on the BBC payroll. Ms Ackroyd's company was appealing against demands for some £419,151 from HMRC relating to income tax and National Insurance contributions (NICs) for the tax years 2006/07 to 2012/13. It will be interesting to see if there is an appeal to a higher court and whether this decision will be used by HMRC against other BBC presenters and other personal service companies. Please contact us if you wish to discuss whether or not the employment status or IR35 rules impact on your working arrangements.

PENSION FUNDS CAN BE VERY EFFECTIVE IN ESTATE PLANNING

We have featured the tax efficiency of pension fund investment in a number of recent newsletters. As well as the increased flexibility in terms of drawdown arrangements that were introduced in April 2015 there were some important changes to what happens to the undrawn funds on death. These changes mean that your pension fund can be passed to survivors tax efficiently.

Where the pension scheme member dies under age 75 certain lump sum death benefits are now tax-free, for example a drawdown or flexi-drawdown pension fund's lump sum death benefit or an uncrystallised fund's lump sum death benefit.

Where the member at the time of their death was age 75 or older the special lump sum death benefit charge on the fund will be 45%. However, if a nominated beneficiary wants to draw down income each year rather than take the lump sum the amounts drawn would be taxed at their marginal income tax rate. It has recently been reported that there are currently £2 billion of pension assets in drawdown where the beneficiary is aged under 55 suggesting that a significant number of individuals have taken advantage of the new rules.

Note that cash and quoted shares, including those held within an ISA, are subject to inheritance tax on death whereas pension fund assets are generally free from inheritance tax. It may therefore be more tax efficient to spend or give away cash and shares rather than draw on the pension fund.

WANT TO JOIN THE MAKING TAX DIGITAL VAT PILOT?

HMRC have announced that they are looking for suitable businesses to sign up for the pilot testing of the new system of digital reporting of VAT information. Turkeys voting for Christmas springs to mind?

After a period of testing the new system is scheduled to go live in April 2019 for VAT registered businesses with turnover in excess of the £85,000 VAT registration threshold.

ARE YOU READY FOR MAKING TAX DIGITAL (MTD)?

In just over twelve months most VAT registered businesses will need to comply with new legislation requiring them to submit their VAT returns electronically. Returns must be filed from within their software in an “end to end digital process” which links to HMRC software. It will not be permitted to print out from one software package and re-key the data into another.

Keeping financial records will become digital and most businesses will need to use software or apps to keep their records - the days of manual record keeping are over!

There are some exemptions, but for most businesses with turnover above the VAT threshold of £85,000 you will need to start planning for Digital Tax now, especially since the web-based VAT 100 Return will be withdrawn.

So, what's the good news?

AP Accountancy Ltd has teamed up with Quickbooks, a major Cloud software company to provide our clients with the best possible fully compliant accounts package. There are significant benefits to your business if you change to Quickbooks:

- It's on the cloud so you can get a clear view of your finances any time any place;
- You will never need to do back-ups of your accounting software ever again;
- Run your business from work, home or on your mobile;
- It automatically grabs bank receipts and payments in real time;
- Use your mobile to photograph purchase invoices and expenses and upload these to the software.

Just suppose you could see your results, who owes you money, who you owe and your business bank balance 24/7 from your smart phone!

Silver Certified ProAdvisor

We are certified Quickbooks advisors, and over the next few months we will be contacting those of our clients who will benefit from a change of approach. We will discuss the new HMRC rules and show you how easy the new system is. In the meantime, if you are “Good to go”, call us and we will be delighted to help you comply with Digital tax legislation and take your business to a whole new level.

WHAT IS A FURNISHED HOLIDAY LETTING (FHL) BUSINESS?

There are strict rules for a property rental business to qualify as furnished holiday lettings. The most important conditions are:

1. Property must be situated in the UK or European Economic Area (EEA)
2. Furnished and let on a commercial basis
3. Available for letting for 210 days a year
4. Actually let for 105 days a year
5. Not normally let for more than 31 consecutive days to the same person (i.e. short lets)
6. In other words lettings in excess of 31 days are excluded from the 105 day test as are periods let to family and friends on a non-commercial basis

Averaging Election

For individual landlords the 210 day and 105 day tests apply to the tax year or the first 12 months on commencement of the rental business.

If the 105 day test is not met it is possible to make a “pooling” or averaging election where several FHL properties are rented out in the tax year. You can elect to apply the letting condition to the average rate of occupancy for all the properties you let as FHLs. There are separate elections or pools of UK and EEA properties.

TAX RELIEF FOR ENERGY SAVING TECHNOLOGY

For a number of years there has been a generous 100% tax break for businesses that install energy saving technology in their premises. This is in addition to the £200,000 annual investment allowance for plant and machinery. The technology that qualifies for this 100% tax break includes energy efficient boilers and energy saving lighting systems. This is set out in the government's energy-saving technology list. The list is updated each year. It was announced in the Autumn Budget that new technologies were being added but also certain items such as Biomass fired warm air heaters would no longer qualify from 1 April 2018.

Note also that where the expenditure has the effect of creating or increasing a loss for corporation tax purposes, the company can obtain a repayable first year tax credit. This credit, based on the amount of the loss attributable to the energy-saving technology spend, reduces to 2/3 of the corporation tax rate from 1 April 2018. Thus the relief reduces from 19% to just 12.67% from 1 April 2018.
